Our legal basis for processing personal information

Our legal basis for processing personal information is usually for our legitimate interests, or your consent, for the performance of a contract or to meet our legal obligations.

We may collect and use your personal data if it is necessary for our legitimate interest and so long as its use is fair, balanced and does not unduly impact your rights.

We will ask you to opt in to receiving marketing emails and text messages from us. You can unsubscribe from this at any time.

Usually we will only process sensitive personal data if we have your explicit consent. In extreme situations, we may share your personal details if we believe someone's life is at risk.

We may process personal information because it is necessary for the performance of a contract to which you are a party (or to take steps at your request prior to entering a contract), or because we are legally obliged to do so, for example to meet employment or charity laws.

Why we collect personal information

We collect and use personal information about people who use food banks, supporters, job applicants and volunteers for a number of reasons.

Assisting people that use food banks

We collect personal information from you directly from you when you visit the food bank, or via an organisation that refers you to a food bank for support. Our legal basis for using this information is legitimate interest as we wish to respond to your need for help, and ensure that we are providing help when and where it is most needed.

In some situations, we may ask you for sensitive (special category) information, for example about your health or your ethnicity. We use this information to ensure we're providing you with appropriate support and to help us to better understand if we're meeting the needs of different groups in our communities. This is sensitive personal information, and we need your explicit consent to hold it. You can choose not to provide this information and it won't affect the help you receive in any way. If you provide ethnicity information, it cannot be seen by others and once you collect your parcel this information is anonymised (so that it can't be linked to you).

We share information about people who use food banks with Trussell which works with us and other food banks across the UK. Trussell uses anonymised statistical data to campaign at a national level to challenge the structural issues that lock people into poverty.

What other food banks and referral agencies can see

Your personal information is stored in a secure database run by Trussell, who are a separate data controller registered with the Information Commissioner's Office under registration number Z279027X. If you go to a different food bank in the Trussell Foodbank Network, authorised people at both food banks will be able to see your information, including your visits to the other food bank.

Agencies who refer people to a food bank using the online system called e-referral can see information about you and your visits to the food bank. If an agency with access to e-referral successfully searches for someone with your name and postcode, they can see the date you last received help — but they cannot see any more detail, such as your address or why you needed food bank help, unless they referred you themselves.

Trussell uses trusted suppliers to help run and manage the system, and has contracts or agreements in place with them to keep your information safe.

Developing relationships with supporters

Our work is made possible because of the generosity of our supporters. We need a good understanding of our supporters so that we can communicate with them effectively and appropriately. We will only send you marketing communications via email or text where you have opted in to receiving them. You can unsubscribe from receiving these communications at any time by contacting Anne Cole, Foodbank Manager, at anne@b30.foodbank.org.uk or 07582 143972.

We may research our existing and prospective supporters to develop a better understanding of their interests and actions in support of our work. We use publicly available data sources (such as the Electoral Register, Companies House, public social media accounts such as LinkedIn, company websites, political and property registers, and news archives to supplement the personal data we already have. We may also use the research to profile our financial supporters in order to make appropriate requests to people who have the means and the desire to give more.

Processing donations

If you kindly make a donation to us (of food or money), we will use your personal information to collect your donation and maintain a record of our supporters. Our legal basis for using your personal information for this purpose is to meet our legal obligations, and to fulfil our legitimate interest and fundraising objective. We are legally required by HMRC to collect some personal information, for example, where you choose to gift aid your financial donation.

If you set up a Standing Order or make a Gift Aid declaration, we hold your name, address, email address and bank account details. If you make a one-off donation, our accounts show your name, the date and the amount. Where we reclaim Gift Aid, the relevant details are shared with HMRC, and our auditor may see them as part of examining our accounts.

Dealing with complaints and appeals

If a complaint is raised with us, we will process the personal information that is provided to us to manage and resolve the complaint or appeal in line with our complaints policy. This may include sharing relevant information with Trussell or person that the complaint has been made about. Our legal basis for using personal information for this purpose is legitimate interest.

If you make a complaint about an individual and this forms part of their personal data and the individual requests access to it, we will seek to remove personal information identifying you first. In some situations, we may be obliged to provide your personal data. Where appropriate we will seek your consent before providing the information but may be required to provide this even if you do not consent.

Promoting our cause

We work alongside people who have lived experience of poverty to raise the profile of our cause. We will use personal information that you share with us if you agree to help us promote our cause. This might include photographs and videos. For example, we may ask to use your information in case studies or stories that we will publish or share with Trussell and the media. We will seek to anonymise your information wherever possible and will only use your information for this purpose if you have given your consent for us to do so.

Carrying out surveys and research

If you choose to take part in one of our surveys, we will use the personal information that you provide to process the results of the survey and undertake analysis. We may use a university, work with Trussell or third-party research organisations to undertake analysis of survey responses. Survey results are anonymised before being shared or published. Our legal basis for using your personal information for this purpose is for our legitimate interests, or where appropriate your consent.

Health, safety and security

We will process limited personal data about attendees to our operating premises whether those attendees are employees, contractors, volunteers, or members of the public. We do this to ensure the health and safety of people inside the building as well as the security of the building and its contents. Our legal basis for this processing is our legitimate interest.

Employee and volunteer administration and development

We will process personal information of employees to fulfil our contract with them, and to meet our legal obligations as an employer. This includes payroll processing and the provision of training. We are required by law to share some financial information with the HMRC. We may also need to share some personal information with other organisations, for example solicitors, pension providers.

Where you volunteer with us, we collect personal information to support the administration of your volunteering activity. Our lawful basis for processing volunteers' personal information is our legitimate interest, to meet our legal obligations, or where appropriate, your consent.

For volunteers we may hold up to four records: your initial contact details; your application form, which records your name, address, contact details, next of kin, emergency contact, any health issues, availability, work experience or qualifications, whether a DBS check was needed, and any unspent criminal convictions; an interview form, if you were interviewed; and a volunteer record card. Any grievance, accusation or disciplinary matter is recorded separately.

We share personal information about our employees and volunteers with Trussell to support the work of the Foodbank Network. Trussell uses this information to communicate with our workforce and provide access to support services available. Trussell uses data about volunteers to produce statistical and aggregate information about volunteering across the Foodbank Network to help develop and improve people's experiences of volunteering, for equalities monitoring purposes, and to evidence the impact of volunteering across the Foodbank Network.

Recruitment

If you provide us with information about yourself, such as a resume or curriculum vitae, in connection with a job or volunteer application or enquiry, we may use this information to process your application. We may also collect personal data about you from third parties, such as recruitment services, references supplied by former employers, information from employment background check providers and information from criminal records checks when applicable to the role.

Where applicable, we need to process your data prior to entering into a contract with you, to meet our legal obligations, or because we have a legitimate interest to use the personal information provided for our recruitment purposes. We will not use this information for any other purpose.

Undertaking safeguarding activities including DBS checks

When necessary, we process relevant personal information about employees and volunteers for safeguarding purposes. This might include undertaking DBS and other checks to identify any criminal and other activity we need to be aware of. It may be necessary to share some personal information with relevant authorities such as the police. Our legal basis for this processing is to meet our legal obligations or where appropriate your consent.

Processing expenses

We will use your personal information including your bank account details to process expense claims. Our legal basis for using your information for this is for the performance of a contract.

Governance

We process relevant personal information about existing and potential trustee members for governance purposes. This might include undertaking DBS and other checks to identify any criminal and other activity we need to be aware of to ensure that we select appropriate trustees. Our legal basis for this processing is to meet our legal obligations.

Working with referral agencies

When your organisation becomes a referral partner we hold the name, address, email address and telephone number of your organisation and its principal contact, together with the names and roles of the people you authorise to issue food bank vouchers or make e-referrals. We use this to validate signatures on vouchers, to contact you if there is an important query about someone you have referred, to send replacement vouchers, and to keep in touch — for example to arrange a meeting or invite your organisation to an event. Our lawful basis is our legitimate interest in running the referral system, and meeting our obligations to the people you refer.

Working with food donor groups

When your group becomes a regular food donor we hold the name of your group and your main contact's name, telephone numbers, email address and postal address on our online system. We use this to contact you about food donations — for example to tell you about shortage items, to thank you for donations, or to arrange harvest and Christmas deliveries. Our lawful basis is our legitimate interest in maintaining our supply of donated food. Where we also send you newsletters or updates about our work, our lawful basis for that is our legitimate interest, and every message includes an unsubscribe option.

Sharing personal information

We will only share your personal information where we need to, where someone's life is at risk or we are required to do so by law.

We have data processing agreements or clauses in place with any data processors that we may use, ensuring they will not use your information for their own purposes and that they protect your personal information to the same standards as set out in our policies.

We may also share your information with our bank to process a payment; our professional advisers (such as our legal advisers) where it is necessary to obtain their advice.

Where required, we will process personal information to comply with our legal obligations. In this respect we may share your personal data to comply with subject access requests; tax legislation; for the prevention and detection of crime; and to assist the police and other competent authorities with investigations including criminal and safeguarding investigations.

In some situations, the organisation may transfer some or all its assets as part of a merger or acquisition. If another organisation acquires the food bank, they will hold substantially all the same information and will assume the rights and obligations with respect to the personal information as described in this privacy notice.

How we keep your personal information safe

Different records are held in different places, and each is protected in a way that suits it:

- Volunteer records are kept in a secure, locked filing cabinet. The key is held only by the volunteer administrator.

- Financial donor records, including Standing Order and Gift Aid details, are held in a password-protected spreadsheet on a password-protected computer. Gift Aid reclaim spreadsheets are protected in the same way.
- Supporter contact details are held in a secure online database that can only be reached with a login and password. If you contacted us through our website, your name and email address are also stored there.
- Food donor group and referral agency details are held in a secure online database reached only with a login and password.
- Information about people referred to the food bank is held in the secure database run by Trussell.

Everyone who uses our data systems signs a data protection statement, so they know they must keep your information safe and use it only for the right purposes. All our volunteers also sign a confidentiality agreement. When a volunteer leaves, their access to our systems is removed.

International transfers of data

We may need to transfer some personal data to the third parties described above who are located outside of the UK. In such cases, we will take appropriate measures to ensure your personal data remains protected. If the receiving organisation is based outside of the UK and in a country that is not protected by an adequacy decision (providing an adequate level of data protection) we will take appropriate safeguards, such as implementing International Data Transfer Agreements as part of our contracts with our processors.

How long we keep your personal information

We will hold your personal information only for as long as is necessary. We will not retain your personal information if it is no longer required. In some circumstances, we may legally be required to retain your personal information, for example for finance, employment or audit purposes. We have in place a personal data retention schedule which sets out how long we keep your personal information for. A summary of our retention periods is available below.

People who need help from the food bank	Six years from the date you last received support, after which information that identifies you — such as your name and address — is removed from the database.
People who donate food	Where you give personal information alongside your food donation, it is kept while you are an active donor group. If you tell us you have stopped, your contact details are deleted, though the record of donation dates and amounts remains.
People signing up to a campaign	Your personal information is kept for as long as you are happy to receive newsletters or updates. If you withdraw consent we remove you from the mailing list, keeping only enough information to make sure we do not contact you again by mistake.

Financial donors	Standing Order and Gift Aid records are kept while the arrangement is in operation and then for six years, so that we can evidence our accounts as charity law requires.
Volunteers (inc. people engaged in our participation projects)	Initial contact details are deleted once you send us an application form or tell us you do not want to volunteer. Unsuccessful applications are kept for one year. If you volunteer with us, your records are kept while you volunteer and for one year afterwards, so that we can answer questions about your time with us or give a reference. Records of any grievance, dispute or accusation may be kept for up to six years.
Survey and research participants	Twelve months after survey is completed. Then results are anonymised.
Promoting our work through sharing your story, photographic images and videos	Up to 6 years after consent was obtained, unless you withdraw your consent sooner.
Representatives of referral agency partners	Registration forms are kept while your organisation is an active referral agency. Voucher records, which show the agency and the worker who issued each voucher, are kept for six years so that we can evidence the proper use of public donations.
Complainants	6 years if the complaint is upheld, 6 years if it is not.
Employees	Seven years after employment ceases.
